Question 16 to 20

Read the passage below carefully and answer the questions that follow.

The tapir is a relative of horses and rhinoceros in some ways but it is quite different from the horses. The tapir is the same as horse in the sense that both have odd hoofed legs.

A tapir is usually heavy and clumsy. It is smaller than a rhinoceros and has no horns. Its head looks like a pig's head. Like the rhinoceros, it has small eyes and short ears. The tapir's tail is short, too.

Tapirs live in swamps and streams. You can usually find them in jungles and forests of Malaysia, Thailand, Sumatra and other tropical countries. They like to hide themselves among the leaves and tall grasses. They sleep during the day and search for food only at night.

Tapirs are herbivores. They eat leaves, fruits and other vegetation. Their senses of hearing and smelling are very good. They are also good swimmers and often find protection in the water.

- 16 How is a tapir related to the horse?
- A It looks like a horse.
B It has odd hoofed legs.

Once there was a fairy princess named Rosemary. She lived in the kingdom of Renosia with the fairies and elves. One day, some fierce monsters attacked Renosia and captured all the magical creatures.

Fortunately, Rosemary flew through a secret tunnel and escaped. She wanted to free her people by getting help from other creatures.

While flying in the forest, Rosemary found four gnomes sitting on the toadstools. She told them about the evil monsters who took over her kingdom. She asked the gnomes for help.

The gnomes planned a surprise attack on the monsters. They made magic potions that could turn the monsters into stones.

When they were ready, Rosemary and the four gnomes returned to Renosia and splashed the magic potions on the monsters. All the monsters immediately turned into stones.

Rosemary and the gnomes ran to the jail and freed all the prisoners. Everybody was happy and grateful to Rosemary and the brave gnomes. Good will always triumph over the evils and they all lived happily ever after.
